

Make Your Voice Heard...Take Part in the ICA Resolutions Process!

ICA's annual convention is coming up and we are looking forward to meeting up with cattlemen and women from around the state and hearing about current industry issues.

In addition, we will also spend time updating our policy book. The resolutions process is one of the main purposes of holding a convention. We gather so our membership, the cattle producers of Idaho, have an opportunity to review our existing policies and to present new ideas and new direction for ICA to undertake. Our resolutions determine our priorities for the coming year and provide staff and leadership with direction on how to address, improve, or fix issues facing Idaho's cattle industry. This is where you come in. If there is an issue that you would like ICA to take a role in, or if you would like to see a change in ICA's policies, this is your chance!

The deadline to submit new or amended resolutions for consideration during ICA's annual convention is Monday, October 3.

Send us your ideas by this date, then come to convention and participate in our resolutions discussions which will occur during the council sessions on Monday, November 14 and at the Committee Business Session on Tuesday, November 15. In addition to the new resolutions, members will also vote on whether to renew or sunset several more resolutions that are up for review this year. Resolutions can be submitted after the deadline but will require a 2/3 vote to be brought to the floor for discussion at convention.

If you have a new or amended resolution, or have any questions about ICA's current resolutions, please email
